It recharges from any standard wall socket, and a full charge takes about an hour.

HONDA UNIT MX

Top Speed:	80mph	Acc/Decc:	20/40
Crew:	1	Range:	200mi
Passengers:	1	Cargo:	0kg
Maneuver:	+3	SDP:	25
SP:	5	Type:	Monobike
Mass:	75kg	Cost:	28,000EB

This is the beefier, faster version of the standard Honda Unit.

SPECIAL EQUIPMENT: none

KUNDALINI ONE

Top Speed:	120mph	Acc/Decc:	20/40
Crew:	1	Range:	175mi
Passengers:	1	Cargo:	0kg
Maneuver:	+4	SDP:	20
SP:	5	Type:	Monobike
Mass:	60kg	Cost:	32,000EB

Kundalini's first foray into the monobike market comes out strong. It's smaller gas tank leaves it with less range than it's Honda counterpart, but it's performance far outstrips it.

SPECIAL EQUIPMENT: none

BMW PIRATE

Top Speed:	160 mph	Acc/Decc:	20/40
Crew:	1	Range:	300mi
Passengers:	0	Cargo:	200KG
Maneuver:	+1	SDP:	40
SP:	8	Type:	Monobike
Mass:	100kg	Cost:	75,600EB

Originally introduced as a military vehicle, BMW has started selling pirates to the civilian market. While public reaction was originally disappointing BMW has managed to garner attention by creating Pirate race circuits, originally exclusive to Europe, these races have begun to pop up in North and South America, and most recently the races have become extremely popular in the desert environments of Australia and North Africa.

SPECIAL EQUIPMENT: none

SUZUKI MD-R10

Top Speed:	180mph	Acc/Decc:	23/40
Crew:	1	Range:	150mi

Mass:	200kg	Cost:	EB

A racing monobike built to compete with the BMW Pirate. It's faster but far less maneuverable and twice as heavy.

SPECIAL EQUIPMENT: none

HARLEY INSANO

Top Speed:	200mph	Acc/Decc:	25/40
Crew:	1	Range:	100mi
Passengers:	0	Cargo:	0kg
Maneuver:	-1	SDP:	15
SP:	5	Type:	Monobike
Mass:	100kg	Cost:	EB

This monobike is as light as a pirate, but outperforms the Kundalini MD-R10 ridiculously. It's forward front design however requires an overly complex gyrostabilizer system, and reduces it's maneuverability so badly that it kind of misses the point of being a monobike. Also, zipping along at 200mph with your face inches from the pavement, at bumper height of most vehicles, ensures that anyone riding this bike lives up to the name.

A "dual engine" design provides the Kawasaki Kamikaze with the power of the typhoon or "divine wind" for which it is named. Operated primarily on electrical power (8 hours of travel per one-hour fastcharge), it also features a secondary CHOOH2 engine that can accelerate it to atop speed of 250 kmh at a mere thought from its rider (an acceleration of 50 kmh/phase). The bike's small CHOOH2 tank is good only for about two hours' travel at moderate speeds. The name Kamikaze was chosen because of its association with the suicide pilots of World War II. This is a marketing ploy designed to attract Japan's rebellious youth; glamorizing the tragic deaths of these 20th century airmen has become a popular fad. The motorcycle is highly maneuverable (maximum maneuver speed of 150 kmh). It is only lightly armored and relatively delicate. It's not a bike you'd want to dump too many times. It also offers an improved muffler design that allows it to run almost silently. (The text and Stats for this bike were created from novelist Lisa Smedman's adventure "Ride The Divine Wind" originally published in Adventures Unlimited circa 1995)

Designed specifically for law enforcement, the Mitsubishi PCM-520 features hinged and armored side panels for the officers protection, providing him ample cover without restricting his ability to bail rearward if necessary in an emergence. The forward ehadlights, mounted in retracting cowl on both sides of the bike are contrasted by the emergency lights, red on front and blue on the side panel ends. The police markings themselves are designed from a slightly bio-luminescent material, allowing them to be plainly visible at night without causing a distraction on the road. The bike is aerodynamically maximized, and is able to reach incredible speeds. While a civilian version is sold, this bike is only for experienced riders, beginners are strongly recommended against purchase. The civilian version does not come with police markings or equipment, and costs more due to the discount police departments get for ordering in bulk.

Passengers:	0	Cargo:	0KG

Suzuki is working on a slightly wider, more enclosed cage to combat these issues, which should be available sometime next year.

Perhaps slightly more complicated than it need to be, this bike is still pretty damn impressive. A racing ready superbike the first recumbent of its kind. Be warned, the bike is a very tight fit, and can get uncomfortable fast and will give claustrophobics a screaming fit. The bike can be ridden with the canopy open, but that increases the wind resistance drastically, lowering top speed by 60mph and dropping the maneuverability down another point rating.

As of yet, Harley is the only company to design vehicles specifically for the greater needs of its nomad clientele. Realizing the cultural impact they have had on the nomads, and the fact that nomads are Harley's number one customers, Harley has now produced the Roadhome.

The Roadhome is basically a small shelter built onto a large trike. It isn't really designed to be slept in, but its seats recline flat so that in bad weather conditions you can sleep inside it. What it really does is provide the feeling of home for nomads on solitary long hauls and allows them to carry a little more than they would be able to on a regular bike. It also provides protection from the elements without the claustrophobia of standard enclosed bikes. It has its own water supply, complete with a retractable outside hose for taking showers, built in water purifier, small microwave and stove, and a large storage compartment. It is available in 2 or 4 man versions.

The vehicle is heavily shielded against radiation and EMP, and the outer shell itself is coated in a special compound that repels radiation.

Not sure where to put this, but apparently Arasaka, via Toyochev, has taken "Koma" technology to the civilian market now. Capable of acting as both walker and 4 wheel independent drive transport, they are a bit pricey for a one man vehicle. They do not possess the AI of their military cousins, or their manipulator arms, but they are extremely maneuverable. In walker mode, the top speed is 10mph.

A revolution in vehicle design only possible through citycar size and function. The PM shortens and raises for driving in slow city traffic, providing the driver an elevated view and making the vehicle as compact as possible. Then for faster high speed travel, the vehicle lowers and extends, creating a low profile with greater maneuverability. The vehicle only has enough storage space for a briefcase or small backpack, and only seats one person, still they are selling like crazy. Teenagers are finding them especially appealing, and in Japan there is talks of criminalizing the vehicles due to the go-gangs they have become popular with.

Volkstrad doesn't put the Audi logo on much these days, having designated it strictly for Nextgen product research, so when you do see it on a new vehicle, it means something special is happening. The RSQ is no different. It is quite possibly the most advanced car on the road, and basically re-imagines the automobile from scratch. Beginning with, and most impressively, the drive system itself. An electric/CHOOH₂ hybrid that gets 40 miles to the gallon of a 20 gallon tank, with a performance comparable to any European supercar. In addition, and further away from convention, the car does not run on wheels, instead it utilizes spheres driven by powerful electromagnetic generators, similar in concept to a mag-lev train, and originally conceived by a German researcher named Hanneford. These mag driven spheres use the same system for an extremely intuitive braking system. Most impressively, they also allow the vehicle to travel at full speed in any direction, including sideways. For safety reasons this feature has a computer lock on it, which effectively keeps the car's driving performance in state with conventional driving due to the extreme maneuvers possible. To have the system locks disengaged, you must pass the course with an Audi licensed instructor (driving skill of 6 required to pass), who will then code your DNA signature into the reader located on the steering wheel.

Mitsubishi was looking for a new concept, driving had once again become fashionable, and all the tricks that used to seem fabulous had now become standard. The market, while at the height of fashion appeal, had become somewhat stale. Then they came upon an idea. For many years auto-companies had employed race car mechanics and car customizes to help them design the next wave. They were going to take it to the other side of the fence. They sought out the best getaway driver in the business, a man known only as Bean. Whose legend in the underground world had spread far and wide in hushed whispers. After an exhaustive search they managed to contact him, and after being given a hefty stipend (and rumors of immunity in Tokyo) they enlisted his help to design what he would consider a perfect vehicle. He began with a custom suspension, which was needed to handle the massive cornering performance, as well as the weight of the heavy armor plating built into the chassis capable of withstanding even light assault weapons. Then he implemented a complex 4 wheel drive system. The system is so advanced, that in a stopped position, the wheels can rotate out to 90 degrees, allowing the entire care to move sideways. Next came the engine, an 8 cylinder ram air, turbo charged monster, that not only handles the weight of the vehicle, but allows it to accelerate to 60 in six seconds. The body of the car was the only dispute, he wanted to use a body design nearly identical to the body of the Toyochev Verge, due its roomy interior, and near invisibility on the streets fuel its popularity. Mitsubishi built one in this style for test purposes, but adamantly refused when they realized that it would only serve to boosts the competitions sales to skyrocket proportions. They wanted a sporty, muscle car design, and chose to go with that. Bean stayed long enough to implement the rest of his design ideas, including door hatches (only useable when the windows are up), a self sealing environment system, and a leather interior. Then he took his payment, and the sedan prototype, and went on his way. The Mitsubishi marketing was outrageous, and controversial, showing the vehicle outrunning police and escaping, including making heavy use of the fact that the car was designed by an internationally wanted felon. The vehicle was nearly banned in the US, Europe, and Japan, until it was pointed out that anyone who could actually afford the vehicle was unlikely to do anything illegal with it. Its price tag is indeed hefty, but sales have been steady, and the car instantly became every gearheads dream machine.

The first version was the more popular updated Mach 5, which featured central steering, and two (rather cramped) passenger seats, while the "B" version is the original, and is a more standard auto. Until the release of the Vengeance (below) this car dominated the track. With the highest top speed available and unbelievable handling this car was thought to have been the last word in racing. And while the Vengeance surpassed it, it is still a monster that refuses to be denied. In a startling upset Andrew Bennet won the world championship driving a WOLF at Monte Carlo last season.

LAMBO-FIAT AUTOBAHN-ENFORCER
(from NCPD sourcebook)

Top Speed:	220 mph	Acc/Decc:	35/45
Crew:	1	Range:	200mi
Passengers:	3	Cargo:	200kg
Maneuver:	+1	SDP:	45
SP:	20	Type:	Car
Mass:	1.8	Cost:	162,000EB

Designed specifically as a high speed interceptor for the autobahn in Europe, NCPD recently obtained 3 of these supercars. The Tomcat is one hell of a vehicle, it is fast, tough and maneuverable, but sometimes you just need more, especially with the influx of Japanese Bozuka and nomad speed machines. That's where this beauty comes in. With a top speed of 220 mph and a reinforced body wrapping bumper/ram plate, very little can escape. Unfortunately with a price tag of over 160,000eb, the department most often uses these vehicles for publicity events. Only one ever actually sees active patrol duty. A civilian model is available, but obviously does not come with the police equipment or identification.

Mass:	kg	Cost:	695,000EB

The oversized rounded tires of the 3521 sit almost higher than the car, and its center of gravity is actually lower than the wheels axles... this translates into unparalleled handling, and a car that is nearly impossible to roll. This vehicle is winning races left and right, and dominates the more difficult tracks.

SP:	20	Type:	car
Mass:	2 tons	Cost:	772,260 EB

With its classic formula one styling and clean lines, this car tears down the track and tears up the competition. One drawback to this otherwise exceptional car is its lack of an ejector seat, which was omitted from production to save weight and space. Instead it uses an old fashion rear deployed parachute. Only the most daring drivers will race in this vehicle.

The Citroën Taranis represents a new breed of off-road vehicle. It's independent 4-wheel drive suspension makes use of self adjusting arms, keeping the vehicle stable on uneven terrain, and allows for a tighter turning radius than would otherwise be possible in a vehicle this length. It can raise or lower itself depending on speed and terrain, and at its shortest height (shown) its center of gravity is low and centered, making it very hard to tip... in fact if the vehicle does begin to tip, it will right itself by raising the outside arms to further offset the overbalance and prevent roll-over.

A new concept in both passenger transport and cargo hauling. Most buses are about as maneuverable as an aircraft carrier, no longer is this true. The innovative cab of this truck actually attaches to the trailer for increased aerodynamics and fluidity.

The base of the cab, where the engine and wheels are stored then unlock, and swivel independently from the cab. The rear wheels of the trailer also rotate via computer controlled interface allowing for unheard of turning radius in a vehicle this size. The passenger trailer is double stacked to accommodate 80 passengers in comfort and safety, while the cargo trailer can haul up to 40,000 kilograms of goods. When disengaged from the trailer the truck itself locks back into place and drives normally. It takes some getting use too to drive this vehicle, but its advantages are apparent in any urban environment.

Long haul truckers have always lived on the road, and being away from home for so long has always put stress on their families. Now they can take their families with them. Plenty of room for a family to live in comfort and style, and enough horsepower to haul most anything, life on the road need not be a lonely existence. In fact there is more room in this truck than most apartments a full double level environment packed with all the amenities of home. This is the single largest truck on the road, and just barely makes the minimum size requirements to keep it legal on the streets.

The nomads in America, and Australia, bandits and rebels in Asia, South, and Central America, and the ever present corporate competition, these all provide dangers untold for any vehicle moving goods between major cities. The Mack Blockader is the latest answer, a heavily armored semi with enough speed, armor, and muscle to barrel its way through any obstacle. Of course the fact that these trucks reach the highest dollar in the nomad community should tell you something about its toughness and reliability.

Mass:	8 TONS	Cost:	290,00EB

When GMI bought out Peterbilt in 2018, they found the blueprints for this truck in their R&D department and immediately put it into production. Most trucks rely on muscle and armor to keep them safe from danger on the road. The Highwayman chooses the better part of valor, and simply outruns them. When speed and thrust are needed, the conventional engine disengages and the 4 jet engines wind up, giving this beast highway speed undreamed of by anything else this size, and rivaling supercars in its glory. Just don't ever take a corner with the thrusters engaged. Despite the price tag, the truck has sold well in Europe and America.

Otec sells this boat as a pleasure craft. What they don't say in print is that it was originally developed for the military, and is nearly invisible to radar even in calm waters, and that the engine has special babbles to make it almost silent. However, even without Otec putting that in its adverts, there seem to be an awful lot of these boats in the hands of drug dealers and smugglers.

AERODYNES

SPINELLI AV-00X SITE SEER

Top Speed:	5 mph	Acc/Decc:	5/5
Crew:	1	Range:	20mi
Passengers:	3	Cargo:	0KG
Maneuver:	-3	SDP:	28
SP:	5	Type:	AV
Mass:	1200KG	Cost:	15,000EB

The Site seer is a small observation pod that was originally developed for the military, its low weight and small size made it easy to transport, then it would simply be launched, fly up as high as needed, and act as sort of a mobile observation tower. Of course the military pretty much passed on this in favor of smaller RPV's, and that would have been the death of this creation. However resort towns and sight seeing expeditions pickup on this vehicle and went wild with it. No most parks, resorts, and vacation spots rent these pods out by the hour and tourists use them to go up and observe the view in a manner that was previously unavailable with the exception of hot air balloon's.

This is not what you think of when you picture an AV. Developed as an AV version of the pickup truck, the Scab is most often seen around construction crews and loading areas. While not really built for day to day life, the Scab does barely make the minimum requirements for civilian use, and therefore can be seen being used in the skyways by those who disregard safety for the thrill and benefits of an AV.

Mass:	2.1 TONS	Cost:	670,600EB

A luxury AV that will make you the envy of all your peers. An interesting addition is the panels concealing the ugly thrusters. The Socialite is the cream of the crop when it comes to private aerodynes, don't let the competitor get the upper hand, get your know and show them what it means to be a winner.

BMW SAV-TURBO

Top Speed:	260 mph	Acc/Decc:	35/35

Passengers:	1	Cargo:	5000KG
Maneuver:	-2	SDP:	50
SP:	10	Type:	AV
Mass:	2.5 TONS	Cost:	745,600EB

It moves through the sky like an angry wraith, turning every head it passes. The jet exhaust nozzles are kept very close to the vehicle, in order to preserve its aerodynamic flow, so while this is a very fast AV, it handles rather poorly. Still the simple statement of style that comes with owning one of these is more than enough reason to buy one.

Passengers:	3	Cargo:	300KG
Maneuver:	+1	SDP:	150
SP:	20	Type:	AV
Mass:	2.6 TONS	Cost:	815,000EB

Finally, a performance AV that understands that no matter how good a pilot you are, eventually you are going to bump into something, usually when parking, and ruin your bodywork, possibly even damage your systems. The Pitbull takes this into account, not only does it move like a bat out of hell, but it is also protected from all angles by heavy crash bars, so those little accidents don't turn into big ones, nor do they turn your five hundred thousand dollar work of art into a flying junk mobile.

MACLAREN VERMITHRAX AV-3

Top Speed:	275/150 mph	Acc/Decc:	40/40 25/40

Maneuver:	-3/+1	SDP:	60
SP:	15	Type:	AV
Mass:	2.1 TONS	Cost:	1,125,500EB

The Aerocop, the Leebroy, most AV-3's are about as inspired as a papercut. They are ok in the air, nothing special, and absolutely horrible for ground travel. The Vermithrax is the penultimate of AV-3 technology. In the air it reaches speeds close to the Mach and Skyline, and on the ground its speed is comparable to any sports car. Have the best of both worlds, buy the Vermithrax. The only aerodyne built by Maclaren.

MITSUBISHI ARABIAN RACING AVBIKE

Top Speed:	300mph	Acc/Decc:	50/50
Crew:	1	Range:	400mi
Passengers:	0	Cargo:	0
Maneuver:	-5/-1	SDP:	40
SP:	10	Type:	AV
Mass:	560kg	Cost:	420,000EB

One of the fastest AVbikes in the world, the Arabian is built for speed from the ground up. This AV is actually harder to control going slow than it is full out. It uses small thrusters on the bottom to hover (built in very carefully so as not to hinder the aerodynamics), and a series of small thrusters on the sides to keep it from tipping over. This is truly the most difficult AV in the world to pilot, do not attempt to do so unless you are an expert.

SP:	10	Type:	AV
Mass:	720kg	Cost:	490,000EB

BENSON AVR-X

Top Speed:	500 mph	Acc/Decc:	60/60

The Benson AVR-X is the first AV designed specifically for racing, and as such the body style has become the cornerstone standard for all other racing aerodynes. To the extent that Benson supplies the shell and schematics to other manufacturers to implant their own engines.

OPTIONS: radar, radio, environment control, security system, crash control, autopilot nav computer, GPS,

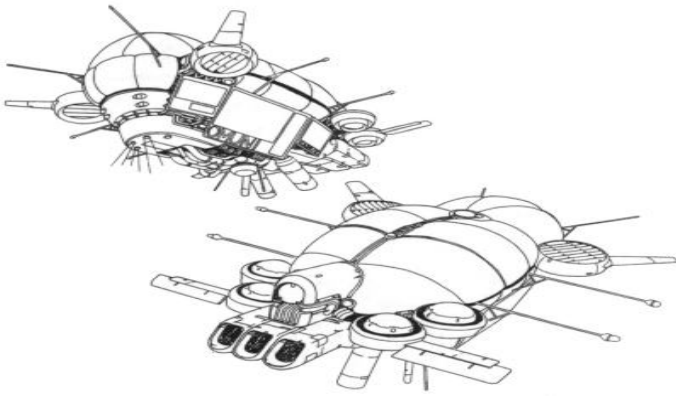

MISTUBISHI BARRACUDA

Top Speed:	700 mph	Acc/Decc:	60/60
Crew:	1	Range:	300mi
Passengers:	1	Cargo:	40KG
Maneuver:	-3	SDP:	70
SP:	20	Type:	AV
Mass:	3.2 TONS	Cost:	1,715,000EB

The first aerodyne capable (though not recommended) of breaking the sound barrier. If you live for speed, this is the AV for you, but be warned, it drives you as much as you drive it, and it's very very unforgiving. Of course with a price tag of over a million dollars, it is assumed you will know what you are doing if you purchase it.
