Silver Dagger with Ruby Hilt

This dagger was once a prized possession of a distant sheik. The sheik once claimed that the ruby was the eye of an efreet that he destroyed. Many disputed the claim, however; the story is that an one-eyed efreet murdered the sheik and burnt down his palace. The dagger is considered +2 to hit and damage, however, it is possible that there is a curse along with it. The dagger is worth 4,500 gp.

The curse: spellcasters in possession of this dagger do -1 hit point per die of damage with their spells. The dagger cannot be traded or sold; it just won't go away. The dagger can be gotten rid of through a remove curse spell cast at 20th level or higher.

Silver Thread

There is enough thread to create cloth up to 3 feet square. That is enough for a shirt or a number of handkerchiefs, etc. The trick is that the weaving/tailor skill of anyone working with the thread must be made at half and the item takes 3 times as long. If it is made any quicker the check is made at 25% of normal. The thread has value of 10,000 gp.

Silver Feather Quill

This silver quill is shaped like a feather and is very light. It has an insert at the base that can accept an actual quill. The quill was fashioned by Akbar for a high priest of Denier who unfortunately disappeared one evening before the quill was finished. The quill is valued at 2,250 gp.

Silver Necklace of Bells

This necklace is made of sturdy silver with a dozen small silver bells attached. The bells ring as they move and they have a delicate sound like faeries dancing in the winds. In fact, Akbar designed this for an elven priestess who claimed to have danced with the fairies. She continued to work with him, changing the tone and shape until this design was completed. She picked up the necklace but was never seen again. The necklace has a value of 8,500 gp due to the size of the work.
