Rod of Parrying

[] [] [] [] [] []

The rod may be used as a melee weapon (club proficiency) and does 1d8+5 (no strength bonuses apply). It can also be used to parry attacks. This option takes a charge and must be stated at the beginning of the round. It may not be recharged, and once its charges are gone it functions as a normal club.

Robes of the Wraith

-These robes provide AC 4 protection to evil wizards and priests, AC 6 protection to neutral wizards and priests, and no protection to anyone else. The robes are permanently black with a bloodstained design. Undead are automatically non-hostile to the wearer. The robes have the permanent smell of death and repulse normal animals and reduce Reaction checks among humanoids by one category (worse) for the whole group of people with the robe wearer.

Ivory Pipe of Aroma

When smoked this pipe creates a warm, friendly scent in a 10-foot cubic area. It can produce the scent of any plant, or woodland scent including garlic and wolfsbane. This scent has no game mechanic effect—it just smells nice. Scents which would drive away hostile creatures (such as wolfsbane or garlic repelling werewolves) provide no more protection from the creatures than the actual plant would provide.
